

Report on World Population Day Program

Department of Economics

On World Population Day 2024, with the theme "To Leave No One Behind, Count Everyone," the Department of Economics conducted a comprehensive program to address various aspects of global population trends and their implications. This program was held in M.V Hall.

The event commenced with a warm welcome address delivered by Meghana, a B.A second-year student. This was followed by valuable speeches from Dr. Vasundhara, Head of the Department of Political Science, and Dr. Pramila, IQAC Coordinator, who shared their insights and expertise on population-related issues.

Next, Indu, a B.A second-year student, and Urvi Kale, an M.A first-year student, presented an informative PowerPoint presentation that highlighted key statistics and trends in world population growth.

G. Hima Bindu, the Head of the Department of Economics, spoke a few words on the significance of World Population Day, emphasizing the importance of awareness and action in addressing population challenges.

Meghana, a B.A second-year student, then gave a speech that further elaborated on the day's theme, providing additional context and perspectives.

The program concluded with a vote of thanks by Vasantha, a B.A second-year student, who expressed gratitude to all participants and attendees.

After successfully completing with the indoor program, faculty from Department of Economics G.Hima Bindu and D.Bhavani, Dr.Y.Vasundhara from Political Science, Dr.Vasantha from Department of Hindi, and the students organized a rally, enthusiastically chanting slogans to raise awareness about World Population Day and its significance.
